

General Atlantic Completes Investment in XP Investimentos

SÃO PAULO - February 26, 2013

General Atlantic is pleased to announce a R$356 million ($171 million) investment in XP Investimentos (“XP”), one of the leading independent broker-dealers and financial supermarkets in Brazil, for a minority stake in the company. The investment is dependent on regulatory approval by the Brazilian Central Bank (“Banco Central do Brasil”).

“We are very excited for the opportunity to partner with General Atlantic. This is an important step in the history of XP as GA will be instrumental in helping us achieve our strategic objectives. GA understands XP’s value as a financial supermarket, allowing Brazilians a new way to invest,” said Guilherme Benchimol, CEO and co-founder of XP Investimentos. “GA brings deep knowledge of financial services and technology and a long history of helping companies grow. We look forward to a strong partnership.”

“Brazil will be transformed by a new era of lower interest rates and the development of the Brazilian investor class, which will increasingly turn to independent players for high quality financial advice. We have been inspired by XP’s vision, focus on the customer, and entrepreneurial spirit. We believe that XP will lead the development of the retail asset management industry and positively change the way Brazilians invest,” said Martin Escobari, Managing Director of General Atlantic and Head of the firm’s Latin American investment program. General Atlantic plans to support XP with capital and strategic advice, further developing its platform of financial products to solidify its position as the leading financial supermarket in Brazil.

XP Investimentos has grown exponentially from a start-up independent financial advisory shop in 2001 to become one of the largest retail broker-dealers and independent providers of investment advisory services to Brazil’s retail investors with a network of 390 offices. Through institutional client teams in Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, and New York, XP also serves as a full-service broker-dealer, offering equities, derivatives, and fixed income trading, proprietary liquidity sourcing, low latency and electronic trading, research, as well as corporate finance and advisory services.
